AND BRITISH NORTH AMERICA SOCIETY FOR EDUCATING THE POOR, held at Exeter Hall, May 13th, 1845,*

Newfoundland, seconded by the Rev. J. Charlesworth, B.D., Rector of St. Mildred's, Bread Street, London,*

William Bardgett, Esq.
S. B. Brooke, Esq.
Rev. Thomas Dale, M.A.

seconded by the Rev. H. W. Wright, M.A., Rector of St. John's, Newcastle-on-Tyne,*

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY,

- 2d. That this Meeting has heard with lively interest the details of the Society's operations during the past year; and at this important crisis of its history, when the necessity of an effective school system on Scriptural principles for the British Colonies is so generally acknowledged, and the fitness of the Society for the work (if adequately supported) so universally admitted, this Meeting rejoices in the prospect of the Society's extended operations; and feels called upon to redoubled exertions, and to earnest prayer to God that it may please Him, who has long used it as an instrument of good in the first and oldest Colony, to crown the design with His blessing: so that, in the words of one who has recorded its worth and faithfulness, the Society may be so supported as to become the principal Colonial School Society in connexion with the Established Church.

On the Motion of the Rev. David Cooper, M.A., Secretary to the Church Education Society for Ireland, seconded by the Rev. Edwin Sidney, M.A. of Acle,

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY,

- 3d. That this Meeting, solemnly convinced that without the grace of the Holy Spirit all human efforts are unavailing, and reminded by the Church at this season of the duty of praying for the guidance and illumination of the same Spirit, earnestly recommends united intercession on behalf of this and kindred Institutions; while it gratefully acknowledges the kindness of its friends, more especially the Rev. Hugh Stowell for preaching the Annual Sermon before the Society, and to the Rev. M. Gibbs, Rector of Christ Church, Newgate Street, for granting his Church on that occasion.

On the Motion of the Rev. W. Harker, B.A. of Fairford, seconded by Percival White, Esq. of Clapham,

- 4th. That the best Thanks of this Meeting be given to Joseph Wilson, Esq. for so kindly presiding on this occasion in the absence of the Right Hon. Lord Bexley, whose state of health has prevented the Society the privilege of his Lordship's presence.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND BRITISH NORTH AMERICA SOCIETY FOR EDUCATING THE POOR.

AFTER the lapse of another year, it again devolves upon the Committee in meeting the Subscribers and friends of the Society, to submit a Report of its proceedings; and they would do this in the spirit of humble gratitude to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, under whose gracious Providence so humble an instrumentality has effected so much good. To God be all the praise, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

With thankfulness the Committee have to remark, that, through the goodness of God, there has been, with one or two exceptions, no interruption to the duties of the Teachers occasioned by sickness, while they have been graciously preserved to prosecute their labours in the spirit of brotherly love and Christian faithfulness.

There is a strong and increasing attachment to the Society in the Stations it has long occupied; while, in those more recently opened, the poor people are shewing how greatly they value the privilege of a religious education by their contributions, gratuitous erection of school-houses, and dwellings for the Teachers, and by their readiness in every way in their power to add to the comfort and support of the Masters; while adjoining settlements, or those more distant, are urging with the utmost anxiety their affecting appeal to the Society to extend its blessings to them.

Such, indeed, is now the impulse given to the cause of Education in Newfoundland, that, were the funds provided, the Society's agency might be more than doubled, and yet not meet the applications for aid.

Your Committee will now lay before you extracts from the communications which have been received from their agents.

The following account of the Mission of the Rev. W. Meek at Bay St. George will be especially gratifying to those friends at whose instance it was commenced.

Bay St. George is about 400 miles westward of St. John's, in which place there had been no efforts of any kind made to benefit the inhabitants, until the Society established its school in 1841.

The Rev. Mr. Meek, who combines the office of pastor and teacher, writes,—

“ Another year has nearly passed away, and the recital of its few and noiseless events may be given in a short space; but not without the expression of humble thankfulness to the great Head of the Church, who alike qualifies and preserves an archbishop in carrying the Gospel message to a throne, and a deacon in a desert in feebly delivering the same message to a few sheep in the wilderness, where the sound till lately was never heard.

“ By the employment of such small means as the few poor settlers could raise, we have been permitted since Easter to assemble in what when finished will be a creditable and comfortable place for the worship of God; though at present it is in a very imperfect and unfinished state, and our means are nearly exhausted: indeed the parsonage-house, erected last year, is not yet complete; nor is it an easy matter, in a population so small and so poor, to raise sufficient funds for two or three separate buildings. However, we have so far succeeded, and at the extremity of St. George's Bay, in a district disowned by French and English, where human laws are unknown, there is a building, as a testimony that God is in some way honoured, and where ‘Thou art the King of Glory, O Christ,’ is now, happily, constantly rehearsed.

“ The congregation is, on the whole, satisfactory; for though, during the summer months, the greater part of the people are absent at their distant fishing places, yet in the winter all, with the exception of one family, attend. Thus the ground is broken; the Gospel, however feebly, is proclaimed; a new state of things has commenced: the Sabbath is kept as a Sabbath, and but for the evil example of the French Acadian settlers, who fish and work on Sundays as on other days, an external decency and propriety would prevail, on the whole, satisfactory and encouraging.

"We have admitted into the school, seventy-three since its commencement in September 1841, exclusive of some young men instructed in the winter evenings. About fifty-six are now on the books, who all attend in the winter, but nearly twenty are absent in the summer at the fishing-places: there are not more than three or four other children of age to attend, and these are prevented by want of clothing. So that, notwithstanding some difficulty in the procuring of books, especially for writing, there are very few of the rising race who cannot read the Bible, and join, with some degree of intelligence, in the services of the church. This simple fact is some satisfaction where, three years since, not a child knew a letter, where the Sabbath was blotted out and the Bible was a sealed book: but still we are only beginning—we are forming the nucleus of a future church—we are preparing the way for more efficient labourers—we are casting up the highway and gathering out the stones, that others may say to this long desolate daughter of our Zion, 'Behold, thy salvation cometh.'

"The occasional visits to the Barrisways are associated with mingled feelings of pleasure and pain. One of these visits has just been made, and during the four days of its continuance six sermons were delivered in the three places, most of the people going from one to the others. Alas! such visits seem only to make the darkness visible: neither parents nor children can read, and, scattered as they are, there is little hope of doing any thing for them except by their removing to our settlement, which some of them are about to do this fall, and others, we think, will follow. They are kind and attentive. Sunday, they own, is to them a long wearisome day; many shew much love for spiritual instruction, and for the humble instrument of imparting it, and they have freely contributed their assistance to the erection of our church. The condition of every thing here is one which pleads for the interest and sympathy of Christian benevolence.

"We are greatly indebted to Miss Haydon, of Guildford, for a box containing some very acceptable articles of clothing, as well as some books.

"Obscurity is, indeed, the very element in which we breathe; and to all society, as well as all intercourse with the world, except by means of letters once in the year, we are entire strangers. Yet let it not be supposed we are inclined to complain, or be unhappy; on the contrary, we are thankful for the privilege of having been the first messengers of those glad tidings which make the wilderness and solitary place glad, and the desert rejoice and blossom as the rose. We commend ourselves again to the prayers and liberality of those who can feel for the spiritually destitute. We are in urgent need of assistance to complete our church, and we feel sure that there are those who will rejoice to afford the means for completing it; so that 'that which had not been told this people they may see, and that which they have not heard they may consider.'"

His Excellency the Governor, in a recent visit to this portion of the Island, speaks most encouragingly of the moral and religious improvement of the inhabitants, in reply to an address presented to him of the result of Mr. Meek's labours in that forsaken and dreary spot.

Not less gratifying are the accounts received from Mr. Polden, of Fortune Bay, and Mr. Marshall, of Hermitage Bay, two of the Society's recently opened Missions.

The following will shew the progress which the cause of Scriptural Education is making in those long-neglected settlements:—

From MR. POLDEN'S Journal.

" I am thankful to say my health has been, and still is, through the protecting care of a kind and gracious God, pretty good, so that I have been enabled to pursue my labours hitherto without interruption. The attendance at the school and services has been much better this winter than it was last, as there is only one family in the woods this winter, and they not very far distant from this, so that they and their children attend school and service nearly every Sunday. The reason assigned by the people for not going to the woods this winter, as formerly, was this:—'If we go,' said they, 'we shall lose the prayers and school on Sundays, and our children will lose half what they have learnt; and though we have a long way to bring our fuel, we must work the harder: so we won't go, sir.' This, I hope, is a token for good; and it is my humble, though sincere prayer, that it may please the great Lord of the harvest to bless the seed sown to their present and eternal good.

" It is now nearly a year and a half ago since I first commenced my labours in this place, and, in taking a review of the Lord's gracious dealings with me during that period, I feel that I have much cause for thankfulness for what He has been pleased to accomplish. It is true, I cannot see half so much fruit as I could wish, but, at the same time, I trust I am not left altogether without some encouraging instances.

" The school, I am thankful to inform you, goes on much as usual. I have ninety-eight on the books: seventy attend the Sunday school, fifty daily, and twenty-two the evening school; and I humbly hope that they are all making good progress.

" April 2d.—School all day, as usual. In the evening, at six, met my adult scholars (twenty-four). Sixteen of them are now able to read the Scriptures for themselves; and I cannot but hope that the Society's evening schools will, by God's blessing, be the means of effecting a great deal of good in this island, where the adults, for the most part, had no opportunity whatever of learning when young. I humbly hope my labours in this branch of instruction have not been altogether in vain; at the same time, if any good has been effected, I would wish to ascribe the glory to Him alone to whom it is due. I can only say, they appreciate and value the instruction given them very much; this they have often readily confessed: but, more than this, they have shewed it by their regular attendance. Let the weather be ever so rough and cold, they have never been absent from school, and many of them now learn the Collect and Gospel, and repeat it to me on Sundays; and so anxious are they to retain what they have learnt, that many of them bring their copy-books to me to have a copy put, which they write at home, or, when from home, in their fishing-boats, &c. &c.

" 25th.—Joseph Wills spent the whole day with me in the school, &c. In the course of my conversation with him he informed me that Harbour Mille, where he lives, contains about fifty souls, none of whom can read but himself. He never remembers seeing a clergyman but once since he has been in this country, which is more than forty years; 'and that was,' he said, 'Archdeacon Wix, called at Harbour Mille a long time ago.' According to his own account he has been in the habit of reading prayers to the people for some years past, and teaching the children the Church catechism. He assured me the people (who are all Protestants) are most anxious to hear the word of God and prayers read to them. 'And, sir,' added he, 'I suppose you'll hardly believe what I am going to tell you—that is, that all the folks in our harbour, though they can't read, have a Bible and Prayer-book! And,' continued he, 'do you know how they come to have them? Why, I'll just tell you. About three years back I left Harbour Mille, and went up the bay, thinking I should do better; and as soon as I was gone, and they could not hear the Bible read, they purchased Bibles and Prayer-books out of the store.' I said, 'But what good were they to them, if none in the harbour could read them?' 'Oh, stop a bit,' said he, 'and I'll go on with my story.' He then proceeded as follows:—'They got these books, sir, in readiness, so that when any body came there in a boat who could read, they would get them up to their houses, and make them read the prayers and a chapter or two. Most of the skippers of the dry-fish boats, you know, sir, can read; and if the folks didn't get a chapter read to them like that, they would never hear one at all, I am sure. And even now,' continued this poor man, 'if a boat comes into our harbour, somebody or other goes to see if any on board can read; and if they can, they get them up to their houses, where they read sometimes for hours together.'

" 13th.—This day the people purchased 2000 feet of lumber, for the use of the school-room. After they had bought it all hands set to work, and had it out of the vessel and in the school-yard in about ten minutes; so that I hope (D.V.), ere long, the enlargement of our school-room will be completed, as all are very willing to do what they can towards erecting it.

" 17th.—School all day, as usual. This day several of the men came in early from fishing, and I was very much gratified to see how willingly and cheerfully they worked at the school-room: some were carrying rocks to finish the foundation; others chopping timbers, making mortises, and fitting the stanchions, &c.

" 23d.—At 5 A.M. left Point Rosey in a bait-skiff for Garnish, about four leagues distant, where I arrived about 11 A.M., and was kindly received and hospitably entertained by the poor people. Visited a poor old man eighty-two years of age, whom I found lying on a sick-bed: he informed me he had been there for the last three weeks. I asked him if he would like me to read and pray with him? He said, 'Oh, yes, if you please, sir! I should be terrible glad for ye to.' I accordingly did so, and had a long conversation with him. When I had done he thanked me many times for calling to see him, and assured me it was a great comfort to him to hear the word of God once more. 'I have no body,' said he, 'ever to come to read or pray to me, for none in this harbour can read. I could read once, thanks be to God for it; but now I can't see well enough. I often think of things I used to read about out of my Bible, which you will find in that box (pointing to a box on the other side of the hut), if you will be kind enough to open it. That Bible, sir,' said he, 'is more than sixty years old: I used to value it a good deal, but not half so much as I ought. But many passages come into my mind now I am lying here, from one week's end to another, and is often a great comfort to me when nobody comes anigh me.' Here he was obliged to stop. I found this poor old man (of English descent) living in a small house (or hut), quite alone—not a solitary individual living or staying with him. He said, 'If I had fuel, and somebody to light me a bit of fire, I think I could sit up an hour or two every day; but as I ha'n't got fire, or any body to do for me, I am obliged to lie in bed to keep myself warm.' I asked him if he had any children? He said, 'I have three, sir—one son and two daughters. My son lives in this place, and has a large family to maintain. My two daughters are also married and gone away, so that I am left here quite alone.' I must say I was much pained to see the wretched state of poverty this poor old man was in, brought on by old age. He bears an excellent character, as having always been a very steady, quiet, and industrious man, and, until the last six years, has lived as respectably as any planter in this bay. About six years ago he lost a son, who used to support him and to be a comfort to him in his old age. This son, he informed me (and here the great tears rolled down his weather-beaten cheeks), was drowned while out in a fishing-pont with another man, and ever since that he has been in much distress. Here he is now, at the advanced age of eighty-two years, not able to help himself—not a solitary individual with him, or seldom come near him—and scarcely food to eat or clothing to keep him warm! All I could see on his bed was a few old sails and his old fishing-nets. His house is neither wind nor weather-tight, and nearly falling down from age.

"When I left the poor old man I visited every other family in the place, and informed them I intended reading divine service as soon as all the fishermen were in from fishing. Accordingly, at 8 P.M., when all the fishermen were in, I read public prayers and a sermon to about eighty individuals. In this place, since my last visit, they have erected a school-room (at least, the frame of one), 20 feet by 18, to answer the twofold purpose of church and school. They assured me, if a teacher were sent them they would soon finish the school-room, and do all they could to make the man comfortable."

Mr. Marshall writes:—

"In communicating with you at the close of this year, I feel thankful to Almighty God for the kindness He has vouchsafed to me, in preserving me in health and enabling me to continue my labours among this people, who, I am happy to say, attend very well, especially in the afternoon, when our school-room is generally tolerably full. There is an evident improvement in the harbour, and I trust that the services of our beloved and apostolic church will prove a blessing to them, and that the means used may, through the influence of divine grace, be made effectual to their salvation, bringing them 'out of darkness into light,' 'to know God, and Jesus Christ whom He has sent,' 'to taste the good word of life and the power of the world to come.'

"My school-room is not quite finished, but it is nearly shingled, and almost the whole of it ceiled inside. I have had other two windows put in: it begins now to look tolerably comfortable.

"If I had had a few large Prayer-books, I think I could have disposed of them. If you could spare me a few Bibles I should feel obliged. In the absence of a Lending Library, I have begun to lend among the children and any of the people who can read, and are desirous of having them, a few Tracts; and I trust the effort will be productive of good.

"At present I have on the books forty children: twenty read in the Bible and Testament, write on paper, repeat the tables, &c.; six read in the Sermons of our Blessed Saviour, &c.; seven in the first-class book; seven in the alphabet. I have between fifty and sixty in my Sunday-school: I have Sunday-school twice every Sabbath, and two full services. Two or three of the planters (Englishmen) come occasionally to assist me in teaching on the Sabbath, and a few of the elder children are able to assist a little. About twenty in the Sabbath-school commit to memory the Collects, the Church Catechism, and portions of the Bible; some of them will commit to memory a whole chapter. This cannot fail to have some good effect—the promise of God is sure, and He has promised that 'His word shall not return unto Him void.' I pray for the Divine blessing to accompany every effort made to scatter the seed of Eternal Life, and to spread the saving knowledge of the Saviour among the children of men."

In Placentia Bay, the Society has schools at Rock Harbour and the Isle of Valen, and also in the Twillingate and Fogo Districts, from all of which similar interesting reports have been received.

The Rev. W. Netten, the Society's teacher at Bonavista, writes:—

"Your teachers having had temporary charge of the Central-Union school, on the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Rouse at St. John's, the charge of that Institution was given up to them in the month of October last, and we proceeded to Bonavista in the early part of November. Here we were very kindly received, and were met on all sides with the salutation of 'Welcome to Bonavista!' We commenced keeping school with sixty-six children; but within a few days our attendance was from 150 to 160. We have now on the books 104 boys and 120 girls: total, 224; one day we had 188 present. Many have been destitute of shoes and other garments, consequently they have been compelled to stay at home; but the progress of those who have been able to attend school with any tolerable regularity has been satisfactory; and their Scriptural knowledge, and general perception of the different branches of tuition in which they have been instructed, is gratifying. In addition to our day-school, your teacher kept an adult school of about thirty young men, for three evenings in the week during the winter.

"We have now three branch-schools in operation in connexion with this district. One is at Kiels, a small fishing station, situated about twelve miles by water from Bonavista; and contains, as I was informed, about 270 Protestants, and about 200 Romanists. Here we have a day-school of about thirty, and a Sunday-school of about fifty; we have another school at King's Cove, about nine miles by water from our principal station. In this branch-school your teacher found thirty-six children present: eighteen were reading in the New Testament; seven in the second-class book; eight in the third-class book; and three were in the alphabet-class. Most of them were pretty well acquainted with the Church catechism; and their general knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in which they were examined, was very gratifying. One great inconvenience attending these branch-schools is, that many families, when the season for fishing is over, migrate into the woods for the winter, for the convenience of getting fuel, making hoops, &c. Our other branch-school is at Bird Island Cove, about five miles from Bonavista; there the attendance for the last five or six months has been from forty-five to fifty in the Sunday-school, and from twenty-five to thirty in the day. Their knowledge and understanding of Scripture, as well as their improvement in reading, &c., is, on the whole, satisfactory.

"In the humble hope that the Lord may be pleased to prosper our efforts to educate our rising generation, under the blessing of the Holy Spirit, in the light and life-conferring knowledge of God's word, your teachers would again commend themselves, and the work in which they are privileged to be engaged, to the prayers of the Committee and friends of the Society, that we may ever experience the Lord's gracious power, presence, and blessing; and be instrumental in leading many of the lambs of the fold to Him who saith, 'I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me.'"

The Rev. D. Martin, of Trinity Harbour, sends the following Report for the year ending 25th May, 1844:—

"This month (May) brings with it the pleasing duty of preparing for the information of the Committee a statement of the proceedings of their teacher during the previous year.

"The teacher feels that it is cause for thankfulness and praise that both he and his family have been preserved in health throughout.

"The attendance has been regular, and the improvement of the scholars encouraging. In Arithmetic several are able to work in all the rules of Walking-hame; and three boys, proficient in these, have, as a reward and encouragement to continued diligence, been introduced to the elements of geometry and algebra. In the fall of last year the school was visited by the judge (the Hon. Des Barres), and other gentlemen of the court, when he expressed himself much gratified. And having been told by one that the two clerks in the principal mercantile house (that of Messrs. J. B. Garland and Co.) were young men who received their education entirely in our school, he was pleased to say that the more he saw of the schools in the different places, the more he was convinced the Society was worthy of support, as being one of the greatest blessings to the people. Two other young men, who were taught by us, entered into business last year with prospects of success; and one has left this month for a populous harbour in this bay, to take charge of a school under the direction of the Board of Education.

"I now proceed to report on the several branch schools of the Society in this district.

"At English Harbour the school continues to go on well. The number of admissions is 100; the present number, 39 boys and girls. I have been under the necessity of dividing the time of the teacher between this place and Salmon Cove. This arrangement gives general satisfaction. The admissions at Salmon Cove are 76, and the number at present attending is 29 boys and girls. Here we have no school-room. The people are very poor, but have expressed their readiness to provide the necessary timber, and to do what they can towards the erection of a building; but as I am not able to offer them any assistance, nothing is yet done, and the scholars are assembled in an old and much-dilapidated house, which is offered for sale. The school-room at English Harbour, although it has had something done to it by two or three of the best disposed among the people, remains yet in an unfinished state, not ceiled or lined, and without the necessary furniture of desk and forms. The teacher is a pious young man, and much respected.

"The branch teacher of Cuckold's Cove having removed to Ship Cove, I have reopened the school at this latter place, and engaged him (J. R. Moore) as the teacher of it. 117 scholars have been admitted at this station, 64 of whom have attended during the last six months. A poor lame boy, about twelve years of age, unable to walk, is brought daily to this school by his parent on a slide or sledge; after school he is carried home on the back of some one of his schoolfellows. I have been much pleased, when inspecting this school, at seeing the anxious effort of this poor boy to learn, and the corresponding improvement he had made in reading and writing.

"At Old Bonaventure, where the school is kept in a house hired by the teacher for the purpose, I witnessed a few weeks ago a very gratifying improvement of the children in reading and writing. 136 have been admitted here, 49 boys and girls are now on the list. The school at New Bonaventure is kept in a house belonging to the inhabitants generally, they having erected it some years ago for a teacher's residence. On examining the scholars I had every reason to be satisfied with the progress they had made. The greater part read correctly in the Holy Scriptures of the Old or New Testaments, and many wrote and spelt well. These schools of the Bonaventures are open as day-schools from October to May, and on all Sundays throughout the year.

"About the close of last year I was induced by earnest entreaty to open a Sunday-school at each of the following places, viz. Northside, Cuckold's Cove, and Tronty. The numbers attending at our Sunday-schools are 42, 46, and 43, boys and girls respectively. I feel very much interested in these, and have been much gratified in my visits at beholding the orderly behaviour of the children, and the advance they have made in religious knowledge.

"The total number of admissions at this district, including the principal and branch schools, is 1685, being an increase of 164 since the last Report. There are now on the books of the several schools a total of 529 scholars, boys and girls.

"The contributions to our principal school during the past year amount to 23*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* This sum, perhaps, considering the number under instruction, may not appear large. But when I consider the general poverty occasioned by a lamentably bad fishery last summer, and that followed by an unsuccessful sealing voyage this spring, I cannot complain; it exceeds my expectation. Assurances are given by many of the parents that more shall be done as ability offers. It is to be desired and earnestly prayed for that, in the good providence of God, we may have a prosperous season, a successful fishing voyage this summer, otherwise the consequences must be fearful indeed.

"121 copies of Holy Scriptures have been distributed since the last Report, and the sum of 7*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.* received. 28 Books of Common Prayer, received in the month of October, were soon disposed of by sale, and the sum of 2*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.* received. We have never had Prayer-books enough; the demand for them is a constant one; and I have been under the painful necessity of sending persons away, almost daily, telling them I hope to receive some in a short time. Books of Family Prayer, also, are very much sought after, both among the poor and such as are able to pay for them; and could I receive a goodly number of these, I should be very thankful, assured that, if I did not return more than the cost, the amount would not be far short of it. All my tracts are distributed in the coves of the bay, among the sealers and other persons, who, coming from distant places, have called to ask for a 'tract or two.' Our loan library, which has been in use several years, is reduced to eight books, and these are in a very worn state. Most thankful should I be to receive a fresh supply of books for a library. We have had upwards of a hundred adult readers at a time, and many are repeatedly calling on us for a book to read; but we have none to lend at present. We feel especially for our youths leaving school. We want good books to lend them, that their taste for reading may be cultivated and continued in a right channel, and that their spare hours may be profitably employed.

"On a review of the past, we have every reason to bless God, and to press on in the work which is marked out for us to do, and which we are determined to do, in the strength of Him who has promised all needful grace. Engaged in a field so extensive, furnished as we are with various means for usefulness, and in many instances, I trust, made a blessing to those to whom we are sent. May we feel more and more of that all-constraining motive, the love of Christ! And may our hearts be moved by this holy, happy principle, to love Him who died for us, to love our fellow-men, and to make known with all our energies of body and mind, by every way, the glorious message of mercy, peace, and salvation, to perishing sinners by Jesus Christ! This is our desire. 'Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but to Thy name, give the glory!'"

From the several stations in the district of Conception Bay, and the district of St. John's, the Committee have received the most satisfactory accounts, particulars of which will be given in the "Occasional Papers."

They hope shortly to be able to make arrangements, by which the principal or Normal School in St. John's will be greatly advantaged, with a view to the training of such in the Island as shall be found competent by character and qualifications to undertake the charge of Branch Schools in connexion with the Society.

They have already many such schools in operation at a moderate cost; and your Committee would indulge the hope that they may be enabled to multiply their number from year to year.

There is one point on which the Committee would desire to remark, and to which in several of the teachers' communications grateful acknowledgment is made.

They allude to the gift of articles of clothing, &c., from various friends, for the children attending the schools. During the past year the Society has received a considerable amount under this head;* and for which the Committee would take this opportunity to express their thanks to the benevolent donors.

The following extracts of correspondence, shewing the benefit of such presents, and the gratitude of the poor people, will be read with interest:—

"This day it was very rough and snowy, and, the snow having fallen to a great depth during the night, I scarcely expected to see any of my children at school, as the snow in some places was seven or eight feet deep. However, before I had been in the schoolroom many minutes, I had upwards of forty children ; those who could not walk themselves would give their fathers no rest until they had brought them. I must say I was very much amused to see the poor men coming through the snow with the little ones on their backs : sometimes they were nearly buried out of sight in the drifted snow. I am sure my kind Christian friends at Cheltenham and Wakefield would have been much gratified could they have beheld them wrapped up in the warm and useful articles they so kindly and liberally furnished them with. Sure I am, had it not been for this, many of them would not have been able to venture out of doors such a day as this. The girls' cloaks are just such as are required in this country, as the hoods serve them instead of bonnets, and prevent the snow from beating in on their faces. The boys also find their caps very useful, as they come to school every morning with them tied over their ears, and fastened under their chins. In fact, all the articles are most useful to them, and both they and their parents shew real thankfulness and gratitude for them. And as to myself, I must confess it does my heart good to behold how happy these poor children appear with what they call 'their English clothes' on them. I would here again return my best and heartfelt thanks to our kind friends at Cheltenham and Wakefield for their liberality, and especially to the Rev. C. G. Davies and Miss Sproule, for interesting themselves on behalf of the children and poor people of this settlement."

To a lady in Liverpool, who, with other kind friends, had sent out to Belloram a box containing some Bibles, Prayer-books, and articles of clothing, the teacher writes :—

"I may say, and that truly, nothing at this present time could be more valuable to my poor charge than your bounty. I am thankful to say there are many, both children and adults, who are now able to read the word of God, and there is a general thirst for the 'word of life' and our Prayer-book ; but I feel extremely sorry to say I have not been able to supply half of the applicants. The receipt of the Bibles and Prayer-books contained in your box appears to me to be very providential ; for this reason, I came to St. John's, hoping to be able to obtain a good supply of Bibles and Prayer-books, but, when I arrived here, I found I could scarcely get any, the Society's stock being nearly out. The shoes and flannel will be found invaluable, and will, no doubt, enable many of my poor shoeless children to attend the school and divine service (n.v.) during the next winter, as was the case during the last winter, through the liberality of Christian friends at home. Sure I am, had they not furnished me with warm and useful articles of clothing, many of my poor children and old people would have been prevented from attending school and divine service, and not only so, but must have been pinched with frost and cold during the inclement winter season. It did, indeed, often, yes, very often, cheer my heart last winter to see many a dejected countenance put on a placid appearance, when receiving articles of clothing furnished them through the liberality of friends in highly favoured England. I will give you one instance, amongst many, of the usefulness of shoes and clothing, &c. Last winter, I gave a poor old couple, eighty-five years of age, a pair of shoes each, with other warm garments, and, though they were very infirm, they never missed attending divine service during the whole of the winter. Yes, every Lord's day, poor old George (Rose) and his wife Rachel were to be seen amongst the first who came to the house of God. No matter how much it was snowing, freezing, or blowing, poor old George and Rachel would manage to get to church somehow or other twice every Sabbath. Often have I looked with pleasure on their venerable heads, the locks on which agreed with the snow around."

The Branch Schools at Kiels and Salvage, chiefly supported by the liberal aid of a lady, through Lord Bexley, are most favourably reported by the Superintendent. The Teacher at the Salvage Station writes, under date of May 25th, 1844:—

"The inhabitants of Salvage are, as reported on a former occasion (if recollection fail not), computed at about 300, forming, with two or three exceptions, an entire Protestant Episcopalian settlement—a settlement, small as it is, and overlooked as it may have been, which needs not the commendation of your teacher, although it would be withholding from it its just due, not to speak a word or two in its favour.

"When your teacher reached Salvage, in order to establish there schools on your Society's principles, the work before him, indeed, appeared somewhat formidable. Difficulties and doings of no ordinary character were presented to his view, and the objects to be surmounted seemed greater than could be overcome by the weak but willing instrument employed. But, notwithstanding, by the aid of Him, without whom the strong is as tow, the greatest obstacles and obstructions to the furtherance of your Society's cause in this place have been, in a great degree, removed.

"The schoolhouse and dwelling attached, built about ten years ago by the people of the harbour, have been considerably enlarged, and the dwelling apartment partially repaired, wholly at the expense of the inhabitants of the harbour, for the convenience of your teacher, who now has them in his occupancy.

"The number of individuals admitted by your teacher into your Society's schools at this station is 108—51 daily, 43 Sunday, and 14 adult scholars. There are now on the books 99. The average daily attendance is about 40; some days we have had 48. On Sundays, during the winter, we have had about 60, which is, taking local circumstances into consideration, as many as could have been expected, notwithstanding the Sabbath attendance, during the summer months, bordered on 90.

"Religious tracts and reward-books have been sought after and circulated far and near; in reference to which your teacher feels grateful in being able to say he believes they are read with a considerable degree of attention, and with a desire to be profited thereby. The loan library volumes, for which gratefulness is due to the Religious Tract Society, have been not a little in demand; and your teacher has great reason to hope that the good resulting from their perusal will, ere long, be apparent.

" Out of thirty who a few months ago did not know the alphabet, twenty can now read part and portions of the New Testament. Some of them come forward on each Sabbath unsolicited, and repeat by rote the collect for the day; others learn and commit to memory Watts's Divine Songs, not as a task but from pleasure; while all are very diligent in the acquisition of knowledge, spiritual and secular, yielding such daily satisfaction and encouragement as lead your teacher firmly to hope, by God's blessing, much good will result from his humble but ardent exertions and endeavours in this place."

In turning to CANADA, the Committee must allow the Report of their Superintendent, the Rev. M. Willoughby, to speak for itself. It is to them matter both of surprise and thankfulness that so much has been accomplished at an outlay so trifling; and deeply do they lament their inability to increase their grant at a time when every thing bearing the name of Christian and Protestant so loudly pleads for it.

The Rev. M. Willoughby has presented a Memorial* to His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada, praying for aid, in which he reports seventy schools in operation; and it is but just to Mr. Willoughby to state, that all the aid he has received from the Committee has been little more

* Extract from the Memorial:—

" That the Society, at the urgent request of some influential mercantile men in London connected with the British North American colonies, commenced its operations in several parts of Eastern Canada, by appointing superintendants duly qualified and sent from England, each having under his charge a central school, and several branch schools kept by suitable teachers, who are wholly supported by voluntary contributions. Under these arrangements there have been in operation upwards of seventy day-schools, besides Sunday-schools, imparting instruction to 4600 scholars.

" That the Society's grant has produced from the respective inhabitants in voluntary contributions the sum of 960*l.*; and should your Excellency see fit to recommend the appropriation of a sum of money in aid of the Society's operations, it would secure a further voluntary sum from the people in proportion to such grant.

" That the Society has every facility for procuring suitable teachers, and all necessary arrangements for opening any number of schools, except that of possessing at present a requisite amount of annual income.

" That the Superintendent has received numerous applications from destitute settlements for schools—and he would here particularly name the district of Gaspé, which is represented as in a great degree without the means of education—all of which the Society must reject unless it receive pecuniary aid from the government; but, with such assistance, it would gladly appropriate a part of its funds to meet the wants of the applicants."

for the year than 500*l.*, which has been met by nearly double the amount from the inhabitants themselves.

It is to be feared, however, from his Report, that, unless the Society can grant a larger sum, it will be impossible for him to maintain the existing schools; and numbers of the poor children must again be scattered, left to their former ignorance, or exposed to the teaching of those who lie in wait to deceive.

"In glancing back over the working of our schools during the past year, we have every reason to be well satisfied with the prospect afforded; and the testimony which we are continually receiving, both from laity and clergy, shew that we are not deceived by appearance, but that the good effected is real and acknowledged: indeed, a conviction, not only of the practicability, but utility, of our system in general education becomes stronger year by year, and the proof of its popularity, which in such matters is a proof of its goodness, accumulates day by day. It may only be a natural consequence of the greater range of our efforts, and our having attracted a greater amount of notice during the last year; but it is singular that, at the very moment that we are obliged to refuse applications for aid on the right hand and on the left, and to withdraw from schools that have been long under our superintendence, we seem to enjoy a larger degree of general favour and confidence than ever. In Quebec, we have but one school, and yet the people resident there contributed, including subscriptions to the school, over 100*l.*! This is clear evidence of the way in which we are valued.

"Notwithstanding these demonstrations, however, of efficiency and faithfulness to our trust, we have been obliged to curtail most lamentably our operations, and this at the very time when the call for assistance was loudest, and the likelihood of usefulness strongest; and if we are not enabled soon to hold out some more substantial encouragement than deferred hopes, there is great reason to fear that the influence we have obtained will pass away, and the best time for action be lost. It must not be supposed, however, that we have slackened our efforts, or withheld our care and attention with our decrease of means; and a brief review of some of our doings will shew how much might be effected by a judicious expenditure of a comparatively small sum. In consequence of our necessary retrenchment, we notified the withdrawal of our grant from a school in the township of Hemmingford. We had put the school in operation, had kept it open for some years, and now left it to its own resources, because, although one of the most satisfactory, we believed they might support it without external aid. Every thing appeared favourable for the success of the school; the master had been there two years; he is deservedly popular; the attendance of children was good; and unity reigned amongst them. Being obliged, then, to restrict our expenditure, we considered that this settlement might with safety be left to itself, and, accordingly, our superintendence and assistance were withheld. But a half year had scarcely expired before one of the trustees was sent to represent the certain ruin in which all would be involved unless we again took them in hand. Upon this your Superintendent visited the settlement, and found that it was clear the school must be abandoned if we refused our support; so that, in this instance, forty children are receiving education, and 30*l.* drawn forth for the purpose, which would otherwise be quite lost; for we could not consent to see almost thrown away what we had expended here, as it would have been if the school were permanently closed,—and the grant was renewed. The cause of the difficulty in this place was division and poverty; the want of a managing power divided the people; and while part joined another district, those remaining at the old school were unable to raise the necessary funds to pay the expenses. But our money, trifling as is the sum, together with the control exercised, again united the inhabitants, and saved the school. Now, would it not have been grievous to have witnessed little ones that we had brought on from the alphabet to reading the Scriptures and writing, again falling back into ignorance, and forgetting what they had learned, the 90*l.* that in three years had been paid by the parents, lost, and the taste for education destroyed, merely because we could not render them some slight assistance? Can you not imagine our distress at such a case? and yet we much fear that there have been more than one or two such occurrences. But what can we do? It is lamentable; but, if the funds are withdrawn from us, we have no alternative. Oh, what a wide field there is before us, but how little means for scattering the seed—the Word of Life!

“During my last visitation in February there were two painfully interesting incidents came under my notice. The first occurred at a scattered village in the midst of a French country. We have just succeeded in getting a schoolmaster established. The clergyman is only enabled, from his extensive mission, to visit it occasionally on Sunday, and then only barely to perform divine service; but, under his direction, the master collects a Sunday school, leads the singing, teaches the children to join in this sweet practice, and acts as clerk: its beauty is likely to be appreciated. At the examination of the school some of the parents of the children attended, and were delighted at the progress and improvement which were evident, and their expressions of gratitude and pleasure were most soul-stirring. The clergyman of the parish was with me, and his appeal at such a time was most forcible. I saw the good that was doing. It was most clear that all must be suspended if we continued not our grant, and the old state of semi-barbarism must return. The question was then, could I consent to be a party to such a consummation? And yet what was to be done with no prospect of meeting the demands upon us, with a straitened income, and an empty exchequer? Schools have already been kept open beyond the certainly of being able to meet the expense, with nothing but the bare hope that some means besides the special appeal to friends here to deliver from difficulties would present themselves for the purpose. I was much struck here by the fact that the children who attend our schools are almost without exception clean and neat. Now here they are nearly all evidently surrounded by poverty, many of them with scarcely enough to cover them, certainly not sufficient to defend them from the inclemency of the weather. Yes; some in a Canadian winter without stockings under their shoes, and yet their patched dresses were clean, their hands, faces, and feet washed, and, indeed, every mark of cleanliness and tidiness. It was no studied preparation; for the clergyman cannot visit them more than once a-month, and I had travelled thirty-seven miles without even the minister's knowledge of my intention till I called upon him. Now I look upon even this as a proof that an influence for good is exercised even over the habits and manner of life of those who come into contact with our schools.

" But I must recur to the second incident I alluded to ; it refers to a place that I was told was the very deepest penetration in the forest,—that beyond it, to the north, there was not a human habitation until Hudson's Bay was reached. Into this settlement we had penetrated with our schools ; but, the school having been closed from the leaving of the master, and the difficulty of immediately supplying his place in so remote a part, and from whence communication was so tedious—when our funds became so limited, we were not anxious to reopen it : indeed, we decided that it should not be reopened by us. However, when travelling near there, one of the leading men of the place found me out, and called upon me ; and his account was most pitiable. The school had never been opened, division had crept in among them ; some of the children had gone to a Roman Catholic school ; and those that were not made to read a little at home were running wild, and forgetting all that they had been taught. He besought me to go and help them, and assured me that, for the present, he saw no other remedy than our interference ; but I could only give him advice, and turn with a sad and mournful feeling to other matters.

" It is, however, difficult to give you any idea of our more prosperous schools—of their value and their efficiency. In many places, they are the only schools in the settlement ; and all that the children know, either of letters, or, I might almost venture to say, religion, they have obtained through our instrumentality. Instances are not wanting where our scholars have become themselves teachers under the Society, and done exceedingly well ; and you may well suppose that forty or fifty scholars in a small community, some of them from twelve to eighteen years of age, or even older, cannot be instructed upon religious principles without producing a vast amount of moral good amongst the inhabitants ; and this is corroborated by all parties in the colony."

Your Committee must not bring to a close this portion of their Report, without especially acknowledging the liberal aid of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and the Religious Tract Society, the former having granted 300 Bibles and 500 Testaments, and the latter of Tracts and religious works to the amount of 20*l*.

No one can calculate the amount of good thus effected by the distribution of the word of God and other religious publications in harmony therewith. The Book of Common Prayer also continues to be in great demand, a fact most encouraging to all who are anxious for the spread of Scriptural, Protestant teaching, and who know the value of a form of sacred words, which for simplicity, unction, and truth, has never been surpassed in uninspired composition.

Passing from this imperfect sketch of the Society's operations during the year, your Committee, in conclusion, will briefly advert to a subject on which their minds have been long and anxiously exercised. In the last Report your Committee expressed their conviction that ere long the Society, connected as it ever has been, in principle and in practice, with the National Church, would find it necessary to adapt itself, by a slight modification of its existing rules, as a Scriptural Education Society, to the British Colonies generally. On this subject the Bishop of Montreal has expressed his views and wishes to the Superintendant; and, in a letter recently received, the late Bishop of Newfoundland, now of Jamaica, adverts to the same subject, and urges it, from a conviction of his own experience in Newfoundland, of the Society's high character and fitness for the work. The Ven. the Archdeacon of the Bahamas has likewise written to the Committee, expressing his desire that the Society would extend to his Archdeaconry the blessings of that Education which it has so long and so successfully been imparting in Newfoundland; and they have also received some important communications bearing upon the subject from the present Bishop of Newfoundland, all of which seem to mark out in the Providence of God the path of duty; and, under this conviction, your Committee earnestly hope and pray that, in the effort thus to make the Society more generally useful, the Divine blessing may be abundantly vouchsafed, and such an impulse given, that its additional claim upon Christian support may be deeply felt and liberally responded to.

There is one gratifying fact your Committee must not forget to mention, confirmatory as it is, in the strongest manner, of the many accumulated testimonies in favour of the great usefulness, and admirable working, of the Society's schools.

Accompanying the communications above referred to, the Bishop of Newfoundland, Dr. Field, thus speaks of the result of his personal examination of the schools :—

“I have made acquaintance with most of the schoolmasters supported or assisted by your Society in Newfoundland, and I have great pleasure in bearing testimony to their zealous and faithful discharge of the duties of their important office. They have many difficulties to contend with; nevertheless, on the whole, their exertions, and the result (under God) of their exertions, will justify very strong expression of admiration and gratitude on my part; and there are some among them who, I believe, with God's blessing, would be highly useful in the work of the ministry, having sufficient attainments, and zeal tempered by discretion and humility.”

HOME PROCEEDINGS.

In the receipts this year, your Committee regret to state there is a deficiency in the item of donations, which have fallen off during the last three years; and it is matter of still greater concern that the remittances from associations have been each year declining since 1841.

It was known to the Committee, as appears by the Society's seventeenth Annual Report, that the increasing duties of the Clerical Secretary rendered it impossible for him to devote his time and energies in pleading the cause of the Society in the country, and in forming and strengthening associations.

It was, therefore, proposed, under the hope of not altogether losing his services, to increase the agency of the Society by the appointment of an Association Travelling Secretary.

After many efforts to obtain a suitable person, and an entire failure in the object the Committee had in view—to secure the services of a Clerical Association Secretary—an arrangement was at length entered into with Major Gordon, the Clerical Secretary voluntarily providing for the remuneration, without subjecting the Society to the payment of a sum greater than is usually given to one Secretary.

This plan has now been acted upon five years; but the approaching retirement of your Clerical Secretary, the Rev. J. Haslegrave, consequent upon the reasonable desire expressed by the members of his church, to devote to them his entire services as their pastor, and likewise the resignation of the Lay Assistant-Secretary, Major Gordon, necessarily compelled your Committee to address themselves to the duty of seeking for a successor to the office of Clerical Secretary, and, at the same time, of reviewing the whole subject of the Society's home agency. The depressed state of the Society's funds, the opening prospects of increasing usefulness, and the calls in Divine Providence for greater activity on the part of the Society, have weighed very anxiously on the minds of your Committee. The general result of their prayerful deliberations was an unanimous conviction that justice could not be done to the object and character of the Society, without the appointment of a Clerical Secretary, who could give his whole time and energies to the work of the Society, both in the pulpit and out of it ; and, in so doing, ensure a more general systematic and effective agency throughout the country, more especially in large and populous towns.

After communicating with several clergymen, your Committee have been enabled to enter into an engagement with the Rev. Charles George Smith, a gentleman highly recommended, and who is cordially willing to undertake the office of Clerical Secretary free from any other engagements likely to interrupt or weaken his efforts in the Society's work. Your Committee cannot but feel thankful that there is every reasonable prospect of much benefit accruing to the Society by this nomination, and they pray that the blessing of God may abundantly rest upon your newly elected Clerical Secretary, and his labours in the Society's service.

But your Committee cannot dismiss this topic without more particularly adverting to the resignation of your late Clerical Secretary, the Rev. J. Haslegrave.

The presence of that gentleman precludes that eulogy which all who know him, and those especially who have worked with him in this labour of love, would most gladly express; but it is no more than ordinary justice to that gentleman to record his arduous and anxious labours of ten years' service in your Society. Under his able and judicious management, and owing, in a great measure, to his personal character and influence, the Society has surmounted many difficulties, and secured the confidence and cordial co-operation of the heads of the Church in the dioceses in which its schools have been planted. Our obligation to Mr. Haslegrave is, moreover, much enhanced by the fact that his services have been continued up to the present moment against his interest—at a great sacrifice of personal convenience—and, what has been more trying, contrary to the often expressed claims of an attached congregation—claims not more those of affection than of justice. But it is not easy, nor would it be fitting, perhaps, further to indulge our feelings upon this subject. Your Committee would only offer their humble and sincere thanks to God, who has, through His servant, so greatly blessed the Society; and they would ask its friends to unite with them in praying for our late Secretary, that, in all the relations of life, the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of Peace may be his.

The Committee also desire to take this opportunity to renew their expression of thankfulness to the Clergy and other friends who have again rendered their valuable assistance to the Society, especially to the Rev. Messrs. Anderson and Reade of Brighton, Rev. Messrs. Clayton, Wright, and Maughan, of Newcastle, Rev. Mr. Dewdney of Portsea, and Rev. Mr. Rashdale of Exeter, &c. &c.

Thanks also are eminently due to the ladies of the different associations, through whose kind and valuable agency so large a portion of our funds continues to be realised to the Society; and, also, to the Local Secretaries, on whom much depends of effective working in the country.

Though the Committee have not been able to report so cheeringly of the Society's funds at home, they are glad to give the most satisfactory accounts both from Newfoundland and Canada.

From Newfoundland, including 500*l.* sterling, the grant of the Local Legislature, there has been contributed to the Society 1148*l.* 12*s.* 2*d.* currency, and 957*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.* currency from Canada.

The total receipts at home and abroad, available to the Society (including a remittance of 114*l.* 2*s.* 4*d.* from Newfoundland), have reached the sum of 4145*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* sterling.

But the payments during the same period have been 4548*l.* 13*s.* 7*d.*, leaving, therefore, including the deficit of last year, the balance due to the bankers of 403*l.* 11*s.* 9*d.*

In this statement your Committee find much for encouragement and perseverance. Let the fact be considered, that more than one half of the Society's income is raised by the very persons whom it seeks to benefit - and what stronger argument can be urged for our Christian sympathy and support?

It is a duty to carry the Gospel to those who are unwilling to receive it, and, in the words of Christ, by a holy importunity to "compel them to come in." It is pre-eminently such to obey the call of perishing multitudes, who are literally crying, "Come over and help us!" And when that call is made by those who have first "done what they could" by contributions out of their poverty, and by gratuitous erection of school-houses, in the hope that they may not ask for teachers in vain, surely Christian love will not turn a deaf ear or hold back the helping hand.

And precisely such is the appeal of your Society representing the anxieties, the hopes, the entreaties of thousands, still ignorant, and entirely destitute of all means of acquiring that knowledge which maketh wise unto salvation.

And these, too, be it remembered, are our fellow-subjects, and many of them emigrants from our favoured land.

It is computed that upwards of 650,000 persons, and they mostly of the labouring classes, have gone forth from the United Kingdom to settle in some one or other of the British colonies within the last twenty years, and that the yearly average of colonial emigration exceeds 40,000.

Is there, then, no necessity for the existence of an institution like yours, whose object is to train the young in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord?" Is there not argument enough for its liberal support? Your Committee believe an affirmative response will be given, and that, ere long, instead of having only to report 120 schools, and they with difficulty maintained, the Society, through the mercy of God, will be strengthened to do yet greater things; and that, increasing in influence and usefulness, where it has hitherto laboured, it will gradually extend to other colonies, scattering the seeds of religious knowledge, whose first-fruits is the renewed character on earth, and whose final harvest the matured and perfected character in Heaven.

In faith, therefore, we would again commit the Society to His care, who so far from despising the day of small things, oftentimes illustrates His glory in making them the platform of mightiest events, humbly relying upon His grace and blessing to move the hearts of His people with such a spirit of prayer and love as shall call forth their warmest sympathy and support, and lead them to devise liberal things, so that each anniversary may have fresh instances to record illustrative of that Scripture, "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger."

THE TWENTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY SERMON,

REV. HUGH STOWELL, M.A.

(Of Manchester.)

PREACHED AT CHRIST CHURCH, NEWGATE STREET, ON WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 7, 1845.

"For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creature was made subject to vanity; not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope, because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now."—Romans viii. 19—22.

WE are told, that in those countries where the night lasts for many months successively, the inhabitants have a custom, when they conclude that the day-spring is at hand, to climb the loftiest mountains, taking with them instruments of music, and on the mountain tops they wait and watch with eager eye the first streak of returning day. That first streak is the signal for a burst of gladness and melody, and they welcome the day-spring with acclamations and songs of triumph. Such was the attitude of those who "waited for the consolation of Israel;" before the Son of God was "manifested in the flesh." They were then with earnest eye looking for the coming of Him that should redeem them. And such ought to be the attitude of soul maintained by those, who look for Christ's second coming "without sin unto salvation." Such was the attitude of the spirits of the faithful in apostolic times; and such, thank God, is increasingly the attitude of the spirits of the faithful in these later days. The hope of the Christian is not death, but life; not dissolution, but renovation; not to be "unclothed, but to be clothed upon with his house, which is from heaven."

Our scriptural Church teaches her faithful children, over the grave where the righteous are laid, thus to pray:—"That it may please Thee, O God, shortly to accomplish the number of Thine elect, and to hasten Thy kingdom; that we, with all those that are departed this life in the true faith of Thy holy name, may have perfect consummation and bliss, both in body and soul, in Thy eternal and everlasting glory." This bright hope of the children of God is shared in by the very world that they inhabit; creation herself sympathises with them, and looks forward with longing expectation to the consummation of the saints.

It was for the purpose of enhancing the conception which believers should cherish, of the "glory that shall be revealed," that the apostle introduces the mysterious and magnificent passage that you have just heard. He is speaking of the hope of the righteous as weighed against their sorrows; and he thus writes: "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." For how great (as if he had said) is that glory!—"for the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creature was made subject to vanity; not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope, because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now."

In these times of rebuke and blasphemy and confusion, when "the foundations are out of course," "what can the righteous do?" When the present is perturbing, and the immediate future brooding and gloomy, it is indeed a time for the true servants and soldiers of Christ's cross to be looking above, and looking beyond, and deriving their strength and drawing their consolation from other than earthly sources. And, therefore, beloved brethren, the subject before us is one every way reasonable, as it is sublime.

It is not our purpose and intention to enter into any doubtful speculations, as to the personal advent and reign of Christ, pre-millennial, or post-millennial; it is not our purpose to enter into discussions with regard to the precise period or time when the great event, which prophecy foreshadows, shall be accomplished; but it is simply our purpose to endeavour to unfold to you this deep and blessed passage, with a view to the tendency that it has, to animate our hopes, to quicken our labours, and to sustain and strengthen us in this and every "work of faith" to which our heavenly Master calls us, in order that we may set forth His glory, and set forward the salvation of our fellow-sinners, and be "fellow-workers with God," to hasten on the blessed events, and the wondrous triumphs, which await the Church of the Redeemer and the Redeemer himself.

We shall, on the one hand, turn your attention to the mournful condition of creation since the fall; and we shall then turn your attention, on the other hand, to the glorious hope which animates creation in her fallen state.

May the good Spirit of God attend us; that in simplicity, and soberness, and faith, we may understand and receive the truth of His holy Word.

I. The mournful condition of creation since the fall. We say, of "creation;" and you will perceive at once that we take this to be the fitter word to convey the meaning of the apostle in the original. The translators of our Bible, indeed, seem to have felt this, because the word which they render in the nineteenth verse and in the twenty-first verse by the word "creature," they, in the twenty-second verse, render by the word "creation." There seems to be no ground for this change of word; and if the word be rendered "creation" in the last instance, it ought equally to be rendered "creation" in the former instances. Taking, then, the word in its most obvious meaning, and taking it as our translators themselves, in this very passage, have once rendered it, we abide by this as the truest translation, "the creation." The mournful condition of the creation: by which we understand, with amplitude of signification, the visible and material heavens and earth which God made for an habitation for mankind, together with, to a certain extent, the brute creation, which have not man's reason, and therefore could not have man's responsibility. Now this "whole creation" is said to be in the "bondage of corruption;" it is said to be "made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same;" it is said to "travail and groan in pain together until now." Such is the outline of its mournful condition.

It is in the "bondage of corruption;" enslaved, debased, burdened, enthralled through the iniquity and the abominable depravity of its inhabitant man. The mansion has been spotted and stained by the leprosy of him that dwells in it. It could not be otherwise; such is the canker, and such the defilement of sin, that whatever it touches it pollutes; and whatever it has to do with, it decays and it corrupts. Before man fell, the whole creation, as it came from God, was declared by its Maker, to be "very good;" and in the heavens above, and the earth beneath, and the mighty sea around, there was no spot or stain of pollution; all was purity, even as man was pure. The eye of the Infinite saw no fault, no blemish in His own magnificent structure; everything answered its purpose, everything served and glorified God. The whole heaven and earth were as a mirror without a stain and without the least dimness, on the surface of which was reflected the glory of God. The heavens then fully and perfectly "declared His glory," and "the firmament showed His handiwork," and the earth adored Him, and these lifted up her voice in His praise; and all the creatures, unintelligent though they were, yet rendered their irrational, but fervent adoration to the great God of all. But when man became corrupt, creation became corrupted through his corruption; and man turned the good creatures of God into occasions of sin, and into means of sensuality, and brutal excess, and dark idolatry. The whole creation, in a sort and a sense, became partaker of the defilement of its rational inhabitants; and man forced the pure world into the service of Satan and sin. And the sun that was intended but to point the soul to God, became itself the god of the soul, hiding the great God who made it, and caused it to go forth as a giant to run its race, or as a bridegroom out of his chamber; and the moon and the stars that told of God's handiworks, became objects of dark adoration and worship; and guilty, fallen man polluted and perverted them to hide God, whom they were intended to reveal. And so man turned the brute beasts—the ox that eateth straw, and the calf that eateth hay, and the creeping thing, and the reptile, and the fish of the sea, and the flocks and the herds, into objects of idolatry; or if they were not converted into objects of adoration, they were sacrificed and slain to devils. And the whole earth became burdened, and blackened, and blighted, by the corruption and depravity of its wretched inhabitants, to whom it was intended to be a temple of the living God; it became a temple of lust, and sensuality, and abomination. And the very creatures, that were made for man's good and his enjoyment, became snares to his senses, and entanglements to his soul; and the bread and the wine, to "make glad his heart," and the "oil to give him a pleasant countenance" were turned into ministers of depravity, and made to supply the means of indulgence of his gross appetites, which lorded it over his rational mind, and which made him the slave of Satan. Thus drunkenness and excess, and debauchery and impurity, have been made to find their fuel and their food, in the good things that God had made for man's good and for His own glory. Thus the world is brought into the "bondage of corruption;" it is enslaved, it is depraved, it is dishonoured by guilty man.

And, being thus enthralled by corruption, it is made "subject to vanity; not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected it in hope." It is a marvellous, but a common peculiarity in the government of the great God, who governs His creatures in sympathy and in union, that things should partake in each other's weal, or in each other's woe. He "visits the sins of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation;" as "He sheweth mercy to thousands in them that love Him, and keep His commandments." It tends to manifest, on the one hand, His hatred and abhorrence of iniquity; and it tends, on the other hand, to manifest and magnify His delight in holiness, and in those that are holy. And God has been pleased to order that there should be this sympathetic feeling in suffering or affliction, existing not merely between intelligent creatures, but between intelligent creatures and unintelligent creation, inasmuch as God oftentimes makes the land, and makes the brute creation to suffer, in consequence of the sins of those with whom they have to do. As the psalmist expresses it, "A fruitful land maketh He barren, because of the wickedness of them that dwell therein." And if we want illustration of how He does this, and of how frequently it has been done, we need but direct your minds back to the fair plain of Jordan, over which, when Lot cast his covetous eye, he saw it well watered, as the garden of the Lord; and we need but direct your eye now on that same plain of Jordan, and bid you stand on some eminence, and overlook this once fair and fertile landscape, and what do you now see but a waste, arid, parched wilderness, where travellers tell us not a shrub grows, and scarce a sign of life can be traced, and it stretches around a dark, sluggish lake of waters, that smells of brimstone, and tells of judgment? And why is all this? Because of the wickedness of those who dwell on the plain of Jordan. The judgment on the sinners of Sodom and Gomorrah fell on the very land that they had polluted through their corruption; and the plain of Jordan suffered and sorrowed, with its guilty and its consumed inhabitants. Or, again, we need but bid you look back at another time, upon the land of Zion, that land which God spied out as an heritage for His chosen, the glory of all lands, "flowing with milk and honey," whose hills waved with the cedar, and whose valleys blushed with the vine; where the herds and the flocks were heard lowing and bleating on every hand. And what is it now? A rocky and arid sand, with here and there a bright patch of verdure and fertility, but to tell what once it was, and to show how fearfully it is transformed. And wherefore? Because of the guilt of its inhabitants. Zion has put on her widow's weeds, and mourns with her outcast and desolate children. But we are told that she shall again "blossom like the rose," and again her beauty shall be as Lebanon, when the captivity of her children is turned again. And what God has thus, in a smaller measure, done in individual instances, He has, on the grand scale of universal visible creation, done in regard to the fall of man. "The creation was made subject to vanity; not willingly," for it had not sinned, but unwillingly it is made to suffer with the sinner, to partake with its inhabitants in the judgments that came upon him, "by reason of Him that subjected the same." brought vanity on His beautiful works, and marred, though He did not wholly deface the lovely structure He had built and furnished. "Vanity" came upon it; change, decay, desolation, death. Fruitful tracts became barren deserts, the volcano heaved with its desolating floods, the earthquake rent the bowels of the solid globe asunder; endless instability and endless vicissitude characterized the whole face of creation. Nothing stable, nothing settled, nothing solid; all is continually dying and rising again, but nothing "continuing in one stay." "The whole creation is made subject to vanity," and, on every hand, we see symptoms of decrepitude, we see the premonitions of death, we hear the groanings of the brute creation, the whole "made subject to vanity." Oh! what a change in that beautiful world, over which its Creator looked, and beheld that it was "very good!" Who can tell what was the beauteous state of this earth, ere sin entered in, to mar, and to destroy? Who can tell? Still there is so much that is bright in the noon-day sun, and lovely in the dark and silent night, rich in the varied landscape, sweet in spring, bright and glorious in autumn's plenteousness, that we sometimes are ready to forget, what a change has come over creation, and are tempted to say, 'Only man is fallen.' But, alas, these are but transient signs; and again there comes sad and sorrowful evidence, that the creation is "made subject to vanity." "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity." Creation itself never "continueth in one stay."

To complete the dark picture of creation's mournful state, "we know that the whole creation travaileth and groaneth in pain together until now." What a grandeur there is in this personification of the whole visible universe! But though it is grand, it is not extravagant; we are told in the book of Psalms, that "the earth shall rejoice before the Lord;" the sea is called upon to "roar, with all the fulness thereof," the trees of the forest to "break forth into singing," and the waves of the sea to "clap their hands," when the approach of the great Deliverer is announced. And if the royal psalmist thus made all nature animate and vocal—all nature to praise her Creator, and await her Deliverer's coming; it is still by a similar bold flight of imagination, that the apostle personifies all creation as wearied with the bondage of corruption, mourning and woeful through the continual vanity that harasses and wastes her; "travailing and groaning in pain," waiting for the wondrous transformation that is in store for her, and striving after it as a woman in her pangs, drawing near to her delivery, longeth for the hour when it shall be said—"a man is born into the world." And it is not mere fancy, that we may seem at times to hear, in the moaning of the tempest, in the roar of the storm, in the dashing of the billows, in the sounds and the sighings that we may often hearken to from troubled, from tempest-tossed nature—it is not mere fancy to construe these into the "groaning and travailing of creation," after that great redemption and deliverance that the Redeemer hath in store for her.

Brethren, must we not be arrested with the lesson thus taught us? What a fearful and horrible thing is sin, that it casts its dark shadow over the whole universe of God! that it throws its fearful slime and poison over all that was made fair, and bright, and lovely; and it more or less pollutes and defaces and defiles all! What must be the abhorrence with which the Holy One regards that "accursed thing," that, for the sake of it, He should reduce the unsinning creation into the "bondage of corruption," and make His own fair workmanship "subject to vanity," pour contempt and confusion on the world that He had formed for Himself, and all because of that hatred of the sins of man!

Oh! when we make light of sin, and trifle with that abominable thing that God abhorreth, let us look around us, as well as look within us, and look beneath us; see what sin is, and what sin has done, that we may be humbled, and be confounded, and hide our faces in the dust, and cry out in broken-hearted repentance, "God be merciful to me a sinner!" "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be, in all holy conversation and godliness?"

II. But we turn, dear brethren, to the bright and blessed reverse of the picture; and contemplate the hope that animates creation in her mournful and fallen state.

"The earnest expectation of the creation, waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." That is the great epoch, to which creation turns her anxious eye, anticipating her glorious deliverance, when "the manifestation of the sons of God" shall appear. For we are hid; "our life is now hid with Christ in God." "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." The children of Zion are strangers in an evil world. "The world knoweth us not," saith the beloved disciple, "because it knew Him not." Though He hath chosen them as His children, though He hath justified them in His Son, though He hath renewed them by His Spirit, though He hath secretly adopted them into His family, though He hath made them heirs of Himself, and joint-heirs with His only begotten Son Jesus Christ, yet are they still in disguise; they are His hidden ones; the world knoweth them not, and they sometimes know not one another; and the same lot happens to them as to the ungodly. Sorrows and trials, sicknesses and death, are their portion here below; their bodies go to the grave, as the bodies of the ungodly;

their spirits are indeed with "the spirits of the just made perfect," but still it appears as if one lot happened to all; and the same grave opens for them that fear God, and them that fear Him not. But it shall not be always so. A day of manifestation cometh—a day of public adoption in the presence of the whole intelligent universe, a day of adoption in the day of "the redemption of the body;" for so it follows in the verse immediately after the passage on which we dwell—"And not only they" (the creation,) thus travail and groan, "but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body." The resurrection, therefore, of the people of God, when they shall stand forth known and acknowledged of all men; the day when He shall "make up His jewels," and show them forth before the whole of His intelligent creation; when He shall come "to be glorified in His saints, and admired in all them that believe;" when "the mortal shall have put on immortality, and the corruptible incorruption, and death is swallowed up in victory;" when the body of our humiliation shall be "fashioned like to the body of His glorification, according to the mighty working, whereby He is able, even to subdue all things unto Himself;" when, invested with the similitude of their glorious Head, not only secretly, in their souls, but manifestly and visibly, in their glorified and renovated bodies, they shall stand forth, confessed of all to be the sons of the Lord God Almighty, those in whom He delighteth, for His beloved Son's sake, and on whom He hath poured the fulness of His glory:—then, in "the manifestation of the sons of God," creation shall find her glorious deliverance:—this is that bright epoch, that period foretold by the holy prophets since the world began, the time of the restitution of all things; when the Creator shall say, "Behold, I make all things new." This, therefore, is that period to which the whole creation directs its earnest, anxious look, and for the coming of which it "travailleth, and groaneth," and longeth, until now.

Brethren, behold the hope of the creature. It shall be "delivered out of the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the sons of God!" Who shall describe the full import of this marvellous expression? Who shall describe what is intended by being "brought into the glorious liberty of the sons of God?" Brethren, it cannot be annihilation, as many have been accustomed, as we think ignorantly, and without warrant from Scripture, to suppose. Would it be deliverance to creation, to be annihilated? Would it be any compensation for its unwilling, involuntary suffering, to be entirely blotted out as though it had never been? Impossible! The very fact that creation has suffered with man, and sympathised with man, is in itself strong presumption that it shall triumph with man, and be exalted with ransomed man; that if it were made partaker of the fall, it shall be made partaker of the redemption; that if the destroyer availed to mar it, the Restorer shall avail to beautify it, and with a beauty infinitely beyond what it had been ere the destroyer had defaced it. In the whole history of the dealings of God, as far as we can trace back that history, there is no precedent for annihilation. God is the Maker, not the destroyer. Satan is the destroyer. There is not in the visible universe at this moment, with all its fluctuations, and transformations, and desolations, one sand grain less than there was in the moment when it was finished, when the "morning stars sang over it, and the sons of God shouted for joy." There is not a grain less at this moment, than there was at that wondrous moment. There is no precedent, then, for annihilation, in creation. And where do we find in revelation any anticipation of annihilation? Would not Satan have wherein to glory, if the restoration were not co-extensive with the destruction? If the new creature did not deliver all God's workmanship "into the glorious liberty of the sons of God," would not Satan have wherein to boast? Would he not have prevailed, to a certain extent, to mar and to deface God's gracious workmanship? But, brethren, we, according to the promise of God by the prophet Isaiah, repeated by the apostle Peter in the last chapter of his second epistle, look for "new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." And the parallel that St. Peter draws between the dissolution of the old earth by water, and the dissolution of the heavens and the earth that now are, by fire, bears out, I think, this reasoning most completely. For he tells us that "the heavens and the earth that were before the deluge, being overflowed with water, perished;" and that "the heavens and the earth which now are," shall likewise perish. But how did the old heavens and earth perish? Not that they were annihilated by the flood, but, as it were, altered and transformed, and, to a certain extent, purified and renovated. Such was the effect of the baptism of water, and such, though unspeakably and immeasurably more complete, and penetrating, and perfect, and transforming, will be the efficacy of the baptism by fire. For so complete shall be the purification of the earth and the heavens, that we are told that "the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the things that are therein, shall be burnt up, and all these things shall be dissolved," as if to burn out from the very core, and from the very first elements of creation, the stain and the canker of corruption, that it might be, by the purification of fire, completely reduced, as it were, to the first chaos; but, from the ashes of that funereal fire of the heavens and the earth, shall there evolve a heaven and an earth, unspeakably and incomparably more glorious than that which at first the great Author of all things pronounced to be "very good;" insomuch that the prophet declares that the former heavens and earth shall no more "come into mind;" they shall be lost in the splendour and magnificence of the second heaven and earth.

Now, brethren, the whole visible creation of God is looking forward to and anticipating this blessed hope;—when, with its renewed and ransomed inhabitants, it shall undergo renovation, and shall receive perfection. Oh! the glory of the stupendous plan of redeeming grace! How complete will it be! How infinitely will its effects transcend the glory that was lost in the fall! Then there will be "a new heaven and a new earth;" and the creature shall shine forth in the consummation of redemption, unspeakably more majestic and wondrous than in the accomplishment of the first creation, fair and goodly as it was.

Men and brethren, the subject thus feebly and faintly unfolded, is fitted to sound an alarm in the ears and in the heart of every one of us, who is making earth his portion, and the things of time and sense his being, end, and aim. They that corrupt the creature, and defile themselves therewith, shall never know the creature's promised bliss. And why set your affections on these perishing forms and semblances of things?—for there is really nothing abiding, nothing substantial. "Man walketh in a vain show, and disquieteth himself in vain; he heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them." "Vanity of vanities!—all is vanity." What a pitiful, poor thing, then, for a man to be grovelling and doting upon things, which "perish in the using," and which soon shall be burned up in the fire of the last day! Alas! for the man, who leaves all, when he leaves earth! Alas! for the man, who, in the fire of the great day, will see everything his heart ever treasured, consumed and gone!

Oh! brethren, is not God at this very time shaking and alarming the slumbering sons of men, and calling upon them with a voice that should melt the most hardened heart—"Prepare to meet thy God?" And when we see such signs and events coming to pass, ought we not to "give diligence, that we may be found of Him in peace?" Ought we not to "gird up our loins, and be sober, and hope to the end, for the grace that is to be brought to the righteous at the revelation of Jesus Christ?"

For those that profess to be waiting for Christ's coming, this contemplation is fitted to impart to them adoring admiration, and exalted hope. What is before us? To what have we been born, or, rather, born again? Who shall forecast what we must shortly witness, shortly partake of, shortly have our part in the midst of? Who shall forecast it? "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive, the things that God hath prepared for them that love Him." Redemption in all its stupendous progress, how inconceivably grand! What, then, will it be in its consummation, when the end shall come, and the whole shall be finished for ever!

Oh! brethren, and these things are nigh at hand! The people of God should look through the telescope of revelation with the eye of faith, and they would see in some sort as God sees. And how does He see? "A thousand years are with Him as yesterday, and yesterday as a thousand years." If they see with His focus, if we may venture with reverence so to speak, time will be annihilated, and the promise of God will be at the door; with the judge before the door, they will live as under the impression of the coming of Christ at any hour, in any moment; they will be listening for the sound of His footsteps, that when He knocketh, they may open the door to Him immediately, and the language of their hearts may be, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen."

And may not the children of God comfort and animate themselves amidst the sorrows of the brute creation, the vanity that they track over the face of the earth on every hand, the sad confusions and convulsions that shake this poor, perturbed, tumultuous, chequered, changeful state of things—may they not take to themselves the rich and blessed consolation that the Scriptures of truth supply, when they are told that it shall not always be so? Corruption shall not always enslave; vanity shall not always wither and waste; Satan shall not always "run to and fro," scattering sin and death. But the glorious Deliverer shall come; and the time is not far off, when He shall deliver the whole creation out of the "bondage of corruption" into the "glorious liberty of the children of God." At that glorious change, there shall be no more suffering, and death shall be no more, and sorrow shall be no more; no groan shall ever be heard, no tear shall ever be shed, no pang shall ever be felt; but all shall be harmony, and light, and life, and love and glory. God shall dwell in the midst of His people, and the "new heavens and the new earth," will be worthy of their renovated inhabitants, meet for the sons of God, and meet for the presence of the Lamb, in the midst of the throne.

Beloved brethren, and ought not such bright anticipations to strengthen us in "fighting the good fight of faith," to sustain us in watching and working, till our Master come?—not fearing with the fear of the unbelieving, not sorrowing as others without hope, not driven to our wits' end, as those that do not remember that—as in that wondrous vision of the prophet, which we had uttered this evening in our ears—the whirlwind, the earthquake, and the fire pass by, and usher in the "still small voice" of a present God, in His grace and in His peace. I say, they are not to fear and sorrow, as those that do not remember, and do not believe and know, that after the judgments that are coming to try Christendom, and desolate the earth, there shall be the blessed presence of Him who said of old, when His people knew Him not, and cried out in their ignorance and fear, as He walked on the waves of the Sea of Galilee—"It is I, be not afraid."

Brethren, in that simple, blessed, and useful work of love, to which we invite you this night to lend more of your hearts, more of your succour, and more of your generosity, we may be well animated to think, that we are "fellow workers with God," fellow helpers toward the great consummation,—“preparing the way of the Lord,” hastening, so far as human agency can do it, the consummation of bliss, both of the saints and of creation itself.

The Newfoundland and British North America School Society is not a stranger among you. It has for many years pursued its simple, unostentatious, but most beneficial course; it has never deserted the principles on which it set out—that a Christian education must be an education in the knowledge of Christ, as taught in His simple, unadulterated, un-mutilated Word—that those who teach "His lambs" in that Word, should themselves be first taught of His Spirit, and should be "epistles of Christ, known and read of all men," that they may be warranted in saying, therefore, to the lambs of the flock, "follow us, as we follow Christ." And God has so enabled them to carry out these principles, and practically to maintain them, that, as I am assured, there has been scarcely a solitary instance, (if indeed one,) in all the many years of their operations, of a teacher selected by them, and sent out to our colonies, that has either betrayed unsoundness in doctrine, or inconsistency, glaring inconsistency, in Christian conduct. What a stamp of Divine approval! What an evidence of the labour of the Spirit of wisdom and truth! What a ground for appeal to those, who love the simple truth, and are zealous for its maintenance!

This institution has supplied to our oldest colony, Newfoundland, almost the entire of the Christian instruction that its young natives have received. One hundred and twenty schools, partly there, and partly in Canada, owe their origin to this Society; and still owe, to a great extent, their maintenance. In these Schools, the children of those that have been the children of our land, have been taught the faith of their forefathers; and but for these Schools in Newfoundland, at one time antichrist would have taken possession, almost, if not altogether, of that interesting island. At a time when our Church was almost wholly denuded of her ministers, when there was no chief shepherd or bishop to watch over the scattered flock, Rome was not idle; her emissaries were all abroad; and but for the faithful band of teachers furnished by this Society, who not only trained the lambs of the flock, but in the emergency of the case, gathered together for a time in the Churches the scattered sheep of Christ, and read among them the beautiful form of Service we are privileged to enjoy, and read to them some faithful and useful discourses—but for their timely interposition, humanly speaking, true Christianity would have been almost swept from the Island, and a paganised Christianity, in the shape of Romanism, would have overspread the whole. What a debt is due to this watchful handmaid of our Church!

And when a bishop to that Island was sent out by our Church, and, through God's blessing, rallied the Church there, and brought about a much happier, more united, and more efficient state of things, as a check to the encroachments of Rome, and gathered the Church of Christ which was "scattered up and down as sheep having no shepherd," he bore (and now that he has left this diocese he still bears,) the most direct testimony to the services of the teachers of this Institution. Suffer me to give you his former testimony:—

"My firm conviction is (he writes,) that they (the teachers) will be, under God's blessing, the main seminaries of the Protestant faith in this desolate and benighted land, pervaded as the instruction they impart is by the spirit of scriptural truth and evangelical principle. At distant stations, which, from the paucity of clergymen hitherto employed in this colony, could enjoy but little ministerial care, the teachers of the Newfoundland School Society have held together the congregations of the Church of England, by acting gratuitously as readers of Divine service on every Sabbath, and by instructing them in their religious and moral duties, under the sanction of ecclesiastical authority."

On his removal from Newfoundland, to preside over the diocese of Jamaica, the bishop writes:—

"It will give me inexpressible satisfaction to be instrumental to the extension of the agency of the Society beyond the Colonies to which it has hitherto been confined, and I shall joyfully welcome any of their teachers in this diocese. I hope that the period may soon arrive when the Society may assume a more general name and character, and be so supported by the British and Colonial public, as to become the principal Colonial School Society in connection with the Established Church."

I will now give you the more recent testimony to the schools connected with this Society, by his successor, the present bishop of Newfoundland.

"I have made acquaintance (he says,) with most of the schoolmasters supported or assisted by your Society in Newfoundland; and I have great pleasure in bearing testimony to their zealous and faithful discharge of the duties of their important office. They have many difficulties to contend with, and great allowance must be made in examining their schools. Nevertheless, on the whole, their exertions, and the blessing of God on their exertions, will justify very strong expressions of admiration and gratitude on my part; and there are some of them, who, I believe, with God's blessing, would be highly useful in the work of the ministry, having sufficient attainments, and zeal tempered by discretion and humility."

Not only so, but in accordance with such testimony, eighteen of the teachers at least (I rather believe that the number is greater than eighteen,) furnished by the Society, were, after due examination, deemed qualified and fitted by the bishops of Newfoundland and Montreal, to be ordained; and these eighteen devoted and simple-minded ministers of Christ were added to the insufficient, the fearfully insufficient staff of clerical ministration in these our colonial dependencies. And this was all due to the labours of this Society. Nor is there any telling to what extent this Society might become the nursery for the clerical order in the colonies, were more means placed at its disposal. It is now on the eve of taking a momentous step in advance—giving itself a name which shall denote its comprehension of our colonies in general—so that being styled the "Colonial Church School Society," or the "Colonial Church Education Society," it may fairly invite an extended and enlarged co-operation of the faithful throughout the land, for the purpose of furnishing a sound simple Christianity and an evangelical education, under the wing, and in connection with the order of our scriptural Church, to the multitudes of the rising generation of our own expatriated people, which are now strewn over almost one-fourth of the globe.

And, brethren, these have an especial claim on us. It is not for heathen we seek your sympathy, but for your own baptised brethren, "bone of your bone and flesh of your flesh," some of whom are related to you, perhaps, in the ties of blood, or known to you in the ties of acquaintanceship and friendship; and their claim is therefore especial and pre-eminent, and paramount to the claim of the heathen themselves. Yea, if we would regard the heathen's claim most effectually, we must render more particular attention to the claim of our colonists; for while the colonists caricature and libel "the truth as it is in Jesus," how can we anticipate that that truth should tell with mighty efficacy on heathen minds? Will they not turn round and say, "Physician, heal thyself?" Will they not bid us look to our own European population, and Christianise them and evangelise them, or ever we turn to the heathen? "The name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through us" and our colonists; and England's name has become, in many lands, identical with a scourge, and a pestilence, not with the blessings of the Gospel, because of the way in which her colonists have desolated and defiled and extirpated, instead of coming fraught with blessings of peace and life and truth and holiness, to benefit, and elevate and spiritualise the nations among whom they have settled. Brethren, this stigma must be wiped away, before God will signalise us as a missionary land, and a missionary Church. And if the Society take this step in advance, if it thus "lengthen its cords, and strengthen its stakes," that it may afford shelter to multitudes of young wanderers that are to be found in our colonies—will you not, Christian brethren, support and second it? Will you not enlarge your contributions? and if you have hitherto withheld your contributions, will you not now, according to your ability, impart them? It is the only educational Church of England Society for our colonies. Our Missionary Societies and Bible Societies are quite inadequate and incomplete, unless education go along with them; and, brethren, this therefore, is a department, as extensive as it is open and clear.

May God dispose you, cheerfully and largely, as you may be able, to give to the service of your Saviour on this occasion. Brethren, the time is short—"whatever our hand findeth to do, let us do it with our might," that when our Master come, we may not have bitterly to bewail that we have spent so much on ourselves, so much on the world, and that we have given so little to Him who gave us all, and gave His own heart's blood, that we might have eternal life.

The Committee most earnestly solicit Subscriptions and Donations to enable them to extend the Society's operations to places, in many of which the poor people have already anticipated help by gratuitously erecting School Houses, but which the Society, for want of means has not been able to occupy.
